

DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA

“The science of politics, however, like most other sciences, has received great improvement. The efficacy of various principles is now well understood, which were either not known at all, or imperfectly known to the ancients.”

Alexander Hamilton

“One cannot say it too often: There is nothing more prolific in marvels than the art of being free; but there is nothing harder than the apprenticeship of freedom.”

Alexis de Tocqueville

“The birds left the swamps just like the rest of the animals did. The water, quiet as it was, just by sweeping up the leaves, scared the birds. We could hear their little cries long before we saw them, and when they flew overhead it was like a black cloud passing over the sun. For days and days, and even at night, we could hear their shrill little cries. Olive Jarreau said it was Judgment Day. It wasn’t Judgment Day. Man had just gone a little too far.”

Miss Jane Pittman, in Ernest Gaines’ Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman

COURSE OVERVIEW AND OBJECTIVES

Our aim in this course is to examine democracy as it has developed in America. We want to better understand the meaning of liberty and equality, and the tension between these ideas, in American political experience. First, we engage a defense of American political institutions in The Federalist Papers. Second, we trace Tocqueville's evaluation of American institutions and mores amidst the spread of equality. Then we take up a series of stories whose authors ask us to evaluate the tensions of liberty and equality. These literary works include Ernest Gaines' study of human freedom and American slavery in The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman; Cormac McCarthy's exploration of the fragility of humans and social order; Flannery O'Connor's account of American selves and success; Mark Twain's analysis of the meaning of military exploit; and Wendell Berry's story of nephews who steal their uncle from the hospital (or do they?). In The Death of Innocents, Helen Prejean draws together questions about democratic institutions and human dignity. These stories invite us to more closely examine some important themes we encounter as humans, and as citizens of democracy and of America.

NIU has a plus/minus grading scale for final course grades. Your course grade is based on three 1-page journal entries (30%), a midterm exam (20%), five pop quizzes (25%), and a final exam (25%). I will provide further instruction on the journal entries and expectations for writing. For each pop quiz and both exams, you will need a pencil (be prepared); I will supply the Scantron forms. For both exams, you must also provide a Blue Book. I will administer seven quizzes and drop the two lowest quiz grades. Your final exam will be in DuSable 461, 12Noon-1:50pm, Monday, December 11, 2017. All late material will be penalized. I may administer unannounced bonus quizzes.

PRESENCE, READING, AND ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

Your success in this class depends upon your consistent presence, participation, and integrity. College is about challenging yourself to learn, to think about what matters and about who you want to be. Those are difficult tasks, but tasks more than worth the effort. University life requires us to prepare, to think, and to be present. Presence is about much more than simply showing up to class. It is about sharing in the task of understanding and analysis. That said, showing up to class is an important prerequisite for success. Your classmates, and you, depend on your presence for success in university life.

Before each class period, you should read the assigned materials and thoughtfully consider their significance for our study. Our task is to read sympathetically in order to read critically—that is, to understand what each author is asking and arguing, and then to thoughtfully evaluate the work. Of course, you should bring your copy of the text to class. I will post a weekly reading schedule on Blackboard.

In university, all you have is your integrity. All forms of cheating, including plagiarism, harm both the person who commits the offense and the class as a whole. I expect you to show integrity; there is no other way to accomplish what we are here to do. Those who fail this standard should expect to face themselves, and meet appropriate consequences. Familiarize yourself with the NIU Student Code of Conduct (<http://www.niu.edu/conduct/student-code-of-conduct/>) for guidelines.

CONDUCT AND ELECTRONICS IN CLASS

Class time is set apart for a special purpose. Your aim is to respect others in word and in deed. The use of laptops, tablets, and smart phones is not allowed in class, except when approved for official note-takers. When you use pen and paper, you avoid the distractions a laptop would present to you and your neighbor. In addition, studies show that using pen and paper improves your ability to learn. You may not record this class without permission.

PLUS Pathway: Origins and Influences

Democracy in America (POLS 150) is one of the courses available for fulfilling your general education Origins and Influences Pathway. It is identified as one of the courses under the Creativity and Critical Analysis knowledge domain. Of these two knowledge domains, this course focuses on critical analysis. We explore primary readings in political philosophy to trace the origins of important concepts regarding politics in American Political thought, including notions of liberty, equality, and good governance. In making our way through arguments made by key figures in this tradition, we develop analytic and critical skills as well as an historical sensibility about the contexts in which key ideas developed.

In an effort to contribute to students' general education, this course joins others in the Origins and Influences Pathway in posing some of the same questions, and exploring various possible answers across academic disciplines. We will focus on the following two Pathway questions:

- 1) How have societies balanced group and individual needs over time?
- 2) How have humans perceived nature, culture, and society over time?"
